CLASS COMMITTEE.

FRANCIS HENRY LINCOLN,
Class Secretary.

GEORGE COMBE MANN.
ELIOT CHANNING CLARKE.

Classmates:

We come to our fortieth anniversary with our numbers diminished, during the past five years, by the deaths of eight graduate members, W. R. Ellis, Hoar, Jones, Leavitt, Poole, Reed, Tudor, and E. S. Wood, and two non-graduate members, Hunnewell and Jayne.

The following pages continue the records contained in previous reports and cover the period since 1902. The responses to my call for information have been prompt, and betray an undiminished interest of the classmates in each other's welfare.

The Class Supper Fund will need your attention, as I stated at the Class Supper last year, and will be the subject of a later communication.

I have ventured to include in this Report some verses which I have been bold enough to read, but which I would not have had the courage to print, had I not been requested to do so.

I thank you all for your many expressions of confidence and affection.

FRANCIS HENRY LINCOLN,
Class Secretary.

BIOGRAPHIES.

THEODORE PARKER ADAMS. Born 1845.

While master in the Cambridge Latin School, he was given a year's leave of absence, in September, 1904, and spent the winter in Italy. He resigned his mastership in 1906, and passed the winter of 1905–06 and 1906–07 in Menton, France.

Address: Plymouth, Mass.

SAMUEL PARKER ALLEN. Born 1846.

Continues in the real estate business in Boston.

Address: Beacon Chambers, 17 Myrtle Street, Boston.

AMOS PRESCOTT BAKER. Born 1844.

Still engaged in the manufacture of Ring Travelers, in Providence, R.I., under the corporate name of the Victor Shaw Ring Traveler Co.

Address: 37 Newbury Street, Boston.

*GEORGE LEONARD BARTON.

Born in Gill, Mass., November 6, 1845. Died in Turner's Falls, Mass., February 19, 1879.

CLEMENT BATES. Born 1845.

Lawyer in Cincinnati, Ohio.

Address: Atlas Bank Building, Cincinnati, Ohio.

JAMES THACHER BOUTELLE. Born 1845.

Physician in Hampton, Va.

Address: Hampton, Va.

*ARTHUR BROOKS.

Born in Boston, June 11, 1845. Died at sea, on the voyage from Southampton to New York, July 10, 1895.

FREDERICK EUGENE CLAGHORN BRYANT.

Born 1845.

Has been under treatment for impaired health since the last report.

*WILLIAM AUGUSTUS BUNTON.

Born in Manchester, N.H., June 7, 1846. Died in Great Falls, Mont., July 20, 1893.

JAMES RUSSELL CARRET. Born 1845.

Lawyer in Boston.

Was a resident of Lynn, Mass., in 1897; left that place in January, 1898, and lived temporarily in Bedford, Mass., until end of February, 1898, when he removed to that part of Wellesley, Mass., called Wellesley Hills. That was his residence until October, 1901, when he removed to Lexington, Mass., his present residence.

September 1, 1901, formed a partnership for the practice of law with Edward Nichols Chase and Robert T. Hay.

Has made no foreign journeys unless going to Georgian Bay, Canada, for a month's vacation in the summer of 1906, can be so considered.

Address : 79 Milk Street, Boston.

HEMAN WHITE CHAPLIN. Born 1847.

Lawyer in Boston.

Address: Journal Building, Boston.

WINTHROP LOUIS CHENERY. Born 1845.

In the fire insurance business, and holds numerous town offices in Belmont, Mass.

He writes, "Same old story, nothing new."

Address: Belmont, Mass.

JOSEPH RICHMOND CHURCHILL. Born 1845.

Lawyer in Boston, with office at 194 Washington Street, and Justice of the Municipal Court of the Dorchester District of Boston.

He writes:—

"I have made the following additional contributions to Rhodora, Journal of the New England Botanical Club, namely: 'Preliminary Lists of New England Plants, XVII. Scrophulariaceæ,' February, 1905; 'Three Plants New to the Flora of Vermont,' May, 1905.

"In 1905 I joined the Appalachian Mountain Club. In 1905 I made a botanical excursion to the Lower St. Lawrence River and to the Peninsula of Gaspé, in Canada. In the spring of 1906 I spent a month with a botanical friend and our wives, on Lookout Mountain, in Southern Tennessee and Georgia. Both these expeditions added largely to my botanical collections and herbarium, — matters more interesting, however, to myself than to others probably."

Address: 32 Percival Street, Dorchester, Mass.

HERBERT CODMAN CLAPP. Born 1846.

Physician in Boston, making a specialty of Heart and Lung Diseases. Professor of Diseases of the Chest in the Boston University School of Medicine. Since October 1, 1898, he has been Visiting Physician to the Massachusetts State Sanatorium for Incipient Consumptives at Rutland, Mass., where many consumptives have been cured.

Address: 334 Commonwealth Avenue, Boston.

FRANKLIN JUDSON CLARK. Born 1842.

Retired from business in September, 1894, and removed to Farmington, Me., where he resides.

Address: Farmington, Me.

ELIOT CHANNING CLARKE. Born 1845.

He writes:—

"April 12, 1904, I gave up the treasurership of Cotton Mills and retired from active business. I still keep an office, and occupy my time with sundry trusteeships and directorships. I have a hill farm in New Hampshire, where I live for most of the summer. There I raise horses, thoroughbred Devon cattle, sheep, goats, etc. I have a son in Harvard, and occasionally go there to note the changes since our day. I expect to spend the remainder of my life in such tranquil pursuits."

He was elected a member of the Class Committee in 1906.

Address: 15 Brimmer Street, Boston.

JOHN HOUGHTON CLARKE. Born 1844.

Resides at Framingham, Mass., 2 Winter Street.

He is devoting his time to study and experiments, his thoughts turning to "invention."

He has taken out three United States patents, one English, one Belgian, and two Canadian.

Has sold one United States patent lately for $10,000 in the preferred dividend paying stock of a large manufacturing company in Chicago, factory in South Bend, Indiana, and 10 per cent. cash royalty on all sales under the patent during life of patent, now fifteen years. Also has other stocks, copper, etc., which will soon enable him "to live on Easy Street as well as on Winter Street in all probability."

He owns some hundreds of acres of land in Florida, known to be rich in phosphate and lying also directly over the geological formation, the Eocene division of the Tertiary rocks, the same formation which yields oil or petroleum in other parts of the country, and thinks, therefore, he is in some danger of "striking oil."

FRAMINGHAM, MASS., 3–28–'07.

My dear Classmate,—There is little change in my life of any interest to any but myself. I made that note on slip regarding patents, sale thereof, etc., simply to show that I'm crawling along in what the world esteems success perhaps,—namely, the acquisition of worldly wealth, etc.,—but which between you and me is not all of success.

Circumstances have prevented me from accomplishing what I hoped I might do, perhaps, on other lines during these forty years since we left the shades of old Harvard, and that more than anything else perhaps has prevented me from putting in an appearance at your various gatherings at Class Suppers and Commencements, as I am very sensitive, alas! perhaps too much so, and deplore bitterly my inability to add even one leaf to the laurel wreath of dear old '67.

Charlie Wadsworth went for me on that point awhile ago and wanted me to materialize this Class Supper night, if we had one, but I don't know I'm sure how it may be. I will, if possible, show up, but don't take it too much to heart if I don't.

Yours very truly, dear Classmate, wishing you all good and all goods.

J. HOUGHTON CLARKE,
Class of '67.

Though I haven't accomplished much of value, I've kept out of jail these forty years, which perhaps is something, especially nowadays when so many are either going in or coming out, and I haven't been hung, though perhaps I ought to have been. Whether these are positive or negative gains is hard to say. To me they seem positive gains, though perhaps, when a man is hung, he attains a greater elevation than in most other ways, but I won't take up any more of your valuable time with my moral reflections or psychological deductions (which are they?) J. H. C.

Address: Framingham, Mass.

CLEMENT CLEVELAND. Born 1843.

Physician and Surgeon in New York City.

President of the American Gynecological Society for 1906–07.

Address: 59 West 38th Street, New York, N.Y.

SILAS PARSONS COOK. Born 1845.

Clergyman.

As minister for Berkshire County, Mass., he has oversight of about forty churches. Probation officer for Berkshire County of the Superior Court.

Address: 82 Lenox Avenue, Pittsfield, Mass.

ERNEST WATSON CUSHING. Born 1847.

Physician in Boston.

Professor of Abdominal Surgery and Gynecology in Tufts College Medical School, 1898.

Received the degree of LL.D. from Tufts College, 1898.

Reports "no change since five years ago except that I am not quite so spry on my legs."

Address: 168 Newbury Street, Boston.

LEONARD FRANCIS CUTTER. Born 1847.

Trustee of estates.

Address: 138 Harvard Street, Brookline, Mass.

BENNETT FRANKLIN DAVENPORT. Born 1845.

A Doctor of Medicine, following specialties in Sanitation and Toxicology in Boston. Analytical and Consulting Chemist.

Residence, Watertown, Mass.

He still continues in the practice of medicine as medico-legal expert.

Was employed as an expert upon the following notable trial cases, among others, namely: the Roland B. Molineux and the Albert T. Patrick or W. M. Rice trials in New York City; the August Hartze trial in Pittsburg, Pa.; and the Charles L. Tucker murder trial in Boston,—having been in all these cases upon the side in whose favor the case stands adjudged.

President of the Watertown Historical Society and Chairman of the committee of that society engaged in printing the earlier records of the town. The following volumes have been issued:—

Vol. I., 1894; Vol. II., 1900; Vol. III., 1904; Vol. IV., 1906.

His three oldest children have now been graduated at Harvard University in 1902, 1904, and 1906, and his fourth and last child enters this year.

Address: 161 Tremont Street, Boston.

WILLIAM FRANKLIN DAVIS. Born 1840.

Residence, Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass.

He reports as follows:—

"Still occupied in encouraging Christian Business Co-operation. No change, only as follows:—

'ἀδελφοί, ἐγὼ ἐμαυτὸν οὔπω λογίζομαι κατειληφέναι· ἓν δέ, τὰ μὲν ὀπίσω ἐπιλανθανόμενος, τοῖς δὲ ἔμπροσθεν ἐπεκτεινόμενος, κατὰ σκοπὸν διώκω εἰς τὸ βραβεῖον τῆς ἄνω κλήσεως τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ.'— PHIL. iii. 13, 14.

"Minister of Christ at large, except when in jail, elected thereunto before the foundation of the world, officially notified thereof 8th month, 21st day of 1861, continuing therein until this day."

Answering the inquiry "other circumstances in your life which may occur to you as proper subjects of record," he says, "Too many to mention, since my conversion in summer of 1855."

Address: Mt. Washington, Chelsea, Mass.

*NELSON LLOYD DERBY.

Born in Boston, September 8, 1846. Died in St. Thomas, D.T., May 11, 1888.

*FRANK FISKE DINSMOOR.

Born in Keene, N.H., October 3, 1845. Died in Chicago, Ill., July 23, 1870.

FREDERIC DODGE. Born 1847.

Practising law in Boston until April 18, 1905. Since that date Judge of the United States District Court, Massachusetts.

Residence, Belmont, Mass.

Address: United States District Court, Boston.

*SANFORD HARRISON DUDLEY.

Born in China, Maine, January 14, 1842. Died in Cambridge, Mass., May 28, 1901.

*THOMAS SPRAGUE EDMANDS.

Born in Boston, July 27, 1844. Died in Boston, January 25, 1897.

THEODORE ELLIS. Born 1847.

Still lives in England. Has made several visits to this country, the last one in the summer of 1896.

Address: 12 Cloudesley Road, St. Leonards-on-Sea, Sussex, England.

*WILLIAM ROGERS ELLIS.

Born in Northampton, Mass., July 22, 1846. Died in Cambridge, Mass., January 31, 1902.

He was the son of Rufus and Gertrude Louise [Blake] Ellis. He was descended from Richard Ellis, who settled in Dedham, 1642; the Rev. John Rogers, whose son John was a graduate of and President of Harvard College; and the Rev. John Cotton, minister of the First Church in Boston, 1633, the same over which his father, the Rev. Rufus Ellis, was settled in later years. He lived in Northampton until he was seven years old, when his family moved to Boston. He was educated in private schools in Northampton and the Quincy and Public Latin Schools in Boston. He entered college with the class in 1863. After graduation he was in the iron business, and continued in its various branches in connection with firms and for himself until 1888, when he went into the real estate and insurance business, dealing almost entirely in properties directly about the University grounds in Cambridge. He was a member of the Cambridge Common Council in 1890 and 1891. His wife, who survived him, was Helen Huntington Peirce, daughter of Professor Benjamin Peirce and sister of our own Professor James Mills Peirce.

The optimism with which he looked upon any venture in which he interested himself was refreshing. He was an indefatigable worker, and confident of the success of his numerous plans. Those who were present at one of the Class Suppers in 1900 will remember how strenuously he argued for the building of a new official residence for the President of the University which should be in keeping with the dignity of the office and mark the thirtieth anniversary of President Eliot's administration. The subject was introduced on behalf of the class at the meeting of the Association of the Alumni the next day, at Commencement, but Ellis did not live to see his hopes fulfilled. When the time comes for the accomplishment of this object, let it be remembered that it was Ellis's far-seeing look into the future which originated it.

WILLIAM EDWARD ELLISON. Born 1845.

No change reported.
Address: Care of Mrs. J. H. Ellison, Peabody, Mass.

JAMES STEELE ENGLISH. Born 1844.

Lawyer in Boston.
Address: 68 Cornhill, Boston.

*CLEMENT KELSEY FAY.

Born in Brookline, Mass., November 17, 1845. Died in Brookline, March 15, 1898.

*EDWARD WINSLOW FOX.

Born in Portland, Me., December 26, 1845. Died in Charleston, S.C., February 21, 1877.

CHARLES SIBLEY GAGE. Born 1843.

Remains, as previously reported, under treatment for his health.
Address: Care of Mrs. C. S. Gage, 5 Garden Street, Cambridge, Mass.

FRANK CLARKSON GARBUTT. Born 1837.

Mining engineer and expert. Occupied in examining and reporting on mining properties, mainly in California, Nevada, Arizona, and New Mexico, and in Northern Mexico.

*ISAAC THEODORE HOAGUE.

Born in Deerfield, N.H., December 14, 1844. Died in Boston, Mass., March 29, 1885.

SAMUEL HOAR.

Born in Concord, Mass., September 27, 1845. Died in Concord, April 11, 1904.
The following tribute to his life and character was written by the Secretary for the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, June, 1904:—

Samuel Hoar was born in Concord, Mass., Sept. 27, 1845. He died there April 11, 1904. He was the eldest son of Ebenezer Rockwood Hoar (H. C. 1835) and the grandson of Samuel Hoar (H. C. 1802), whose wife was Sarah Sherman, daughter of Roger Sherman, of Connecticut, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. His early education was obtained in primary and elementary schools of Concord until 1856, when he entered the private school in Concord of Mr. Frank B. Sanborn (H. C. 1855), where he remained until July, 1862.

The War of the Rebellion was then under full headway. Urgent calls were being made for troops, and he joined a militia company in Concord, but, seeing little prospect of being ordered into active service, he left home and enlisted in a Maine regiment at Portland. From this regiment he was transferred, at his father's request, to Co. E., 48th Regiment, M. V. M., which, after two months' camp duty, left for the front Dec. 27, 1862. His regiment was sent to New Orleans, performed camp duty at Baton Rouge, and later laid siege to Port Hudson. He took part in two assaults, and after the surrender of that fort, in July, 1863, the regiment was ordered to Donaldsonville. During an engagement at this latter place he was sun-struck, and soon after contracted malarial fever, which seriously endangered his life. He recovered, however, sufficiently to return to Boston in August, 1863, weighing fifty pounds less than when he left home eight months before.

After his health was fully restored, he began fitting for college under the instruction of Professor E. W. Gurney (H. C. 1852). He entered college in 1864 as a Sophomore and a member of the class of 1867, and was graduated with that class in due course. After graduation he studied law with his uncle, the Hon. George Frisbie Hoar (H. C. 1846) in Worcester, in Washington, D.C., and at the Harvard Law School. He was admitted to the bar in June, 1870, and practised his profession in Boston until his death.

While in Washington, he held the office of Pardon Clerk in the office of the United States Attorney-General under Presidents Johnson and Grant. He was for two years clerk to the District Attorney for the Suffolk District of Massachusetts, and from October, 1887, was the general counsel and director of the Boston & Albany Railroad Company. He held the town offices, in Concord, of Water Commissioner, Selectman, Trustee of Town Donations, and Tree Warden, and was Representative to the General Court of Massachusetts in 1881. He held many other offices in business and social organizations, among which were the following, the dates given being those of the years in which he was elected: Overseer of Harvard College, 1887; President of the Middlesex Institution for Savings, 1890; re-elected Overseer of Harvard College, 1893; Fellow of Harvard College, 1894; President of Concord Free Public Library, 1895; Vice-Chairman of the Boston Terminal Company, 1896; Vice-President of Massachusetts Hospital Life Insurance Company, 1896; Vice-President of the American Unitarian Association, 1898; President of the Association of the Alumni of Harvard College, 1903. He made numerous trips abroad to Europe and the Mediterranean ports, Cuba, Mexico, and across this continent.

On March 28, 1904, while in his office in Boston, he had a sudden attack of vertigo. He was removed to his home in Concord, where after a few days he grew rapidly worse and developed cerebral hemorrhage and paralysis. He lingered, most of the time in an unconscious state, until April 11, when he died. His widow and two sons, aged sixteen and fourteen, survive him. Mr. Hoar was twice married: in 1871 to Miss Kate Wise, who died in 1877; and in 1886 to Miss Helen P. Wadleigh.

This statement briefly but inadequately sums up the story of his well-rounded life. It is, however, a mere statement of facts, and only serves to enumerate the varied calls upon his time and talents which came to him from his fellow-men, as the years went on, with ever-increasing confidence on their part in his ability to serve them. Those who knew him well and were associated with him in business or social relations were drawn to him by an indescribable charm which it is well-nigh impossible for others to understand. His ability and integrity were recognized by all, but his outward manner did not always indicate, to those who did not understand him, the warm and sympathetic heart which was beating within.

He was of sturdy New England stock, and inherited qualities which had manifested themselves through seven generations. One of the earliest of his New England ancestors, John Hoar, is described as a man "distinguished for his bold and independent mind and action." That these attributes were a part of Samuel Hoar's nature no one who knew him from earliest childhood can doubt. Common sense was the element in his character which enabled him to see things as they should be, and made him independent and fearless of what others might think. As he grew into mature manhood, his associates relied upon his good judgment, knowing his opinions would be honest and well founded. He was a good lawyer, and rose to well-merited prominence in his profession.

He loved his native town. With loyal affection he was always ready and eager to serve her. He understood his fellow townsmen, and they believed in him. His sound advice and prudent counsel were sought often, and heeded. He took an active part in town affairs, and attended town meetings, always unselfishly having the town's best interest at heart. He was filled with inherited pride in the traditions, history, and life of the old First Parish in Concord, and was seldom absent from the Sunday services. As in the town, so in the smaller limits of the parish, his was the strong arm to lean upon, whether in times of prosperity or discouragement.

He felt that his college also demanded his best services. Few persons, even among the alumni, realize what ability the administration of the large and varied interests of our great University requires. It is said that no more useful member of the Corporation has ever served her than Samuel Hoar.

Unwilling to accept a fee for professional services, at the expense of the College, he founded the "Class of 1867 Scholarship." Having acted for the executor of the will of a benefactor of the College, whatever fee he received would diminish the amount to be paid ultimately to the College under the will. He was paid $2,000, and gave it to the President and Fellows of Harvard College to establish a scholarship, primarily for the benefit of children and grandchildren of members of the class of 1867. This fund has since been increased by contributions and a legacy from other classmates until the principal now amounts to nearly $5,000. It will, in the future, be still further increased by a legacy of $5,000 from Mr. Hoar. He has also left a substantial legacy to the University, for general purposes, as a memorial of his brother Sherman Hoar (H. C. 1882). By his death at the height of his usefulness, in the full vigor of his manhood, the University has lost one of her most devoted and loyal sons.

*EDWARD JACKSON HOLMES.

*JOHN COTTON JACKSON.

Born in Boston, October 8, 1845. Died at La Cuesta de Castillo, Sonora, Mexico, September 22, 1899.

*ARTHUR EARL JONES.

Born in Greenfield, Mass., August 6, 1846. Died in Cambridge, Mass., August 7, 1903.

He was the son of Leonard S. and Sophia Earl (Gould) Jones. After living one year in Greenfield and two in Weston, Mass., his family removed to Cambridge, where he lived the rest of his life. After attending private schools, he entered the Washington Grammar School, Cambridge, at the age of nine, and E. S. Dixwell's School, Boston, at twelve, where he fitted for college and entered with the class in 1863. He had a part at the Senior Exhibition, and was a member of the Institute of 1770, Natural History, Hasty Pudding, Porcellian, Liberal Fraternity, and other college societies. After graduation he was in Europe almost a year, and on his return he studied law in the Harvard Law School, from which he received the degree of LL.B. in 1869, and in Boston in the offices of R. H. Dana, Jr., and H. W. Paine. He was admitted to the bar in October, 1870, and practised law in Boston during his life. He was a member of the Cambridge Common Council in 1882 and 1883; Secretary of the Associated Charities of Cambridge for several years; Director of the Cambridge Safety Vaults Company. He was married February 13, 1879, to Elizabeth B. Almy, of Boston, who died July 4, 1881. Two daughters survive him.

The Secretary looks back upon an intimacy with Arthur Jones, which began at school and continued for over forty years, with affectionate remembrance. As schoolmates, college chums, and occupants of the same offices for all those years, we shared each other's joys and sorrows. The intimacy extended to our family circles, and the interchange of visits was a genuine pleasure. He was a most agreeable companion to those who knew him best, and one needs to be judged by his closest friends to be thoroughly understood. My classmates will pardon me if I give expression to my personal grief when the tie, which bound us together for so many years, was severed.

*HENRY YOUNG LEAVITT.

Born in Brooklyn, N.Y., June 12, 1847. Died in New York, N.Y., November 12, 1902.

He was the son of Henry S. and Martha (Young) Leavitt. After graduation until 1870 he was at home, in Great Barrington, Mass., and travelling in Europe. He then engaged in business in New York, becoming a member of the New York Stock Exchange, and continued as a stock broker until April 1, 1902.

He was prominent in literary, musical, and amateur sporting circles, being one of the best brush shots in the country, and was regarded as an authority on the habits and haunts of woodcock and ruffed grouse. He wrote numerous articles for the newspapers and magazines on such matters. He composed many songs, comic and sentimental, marches, and waltzes. Some of his compositions attained wide popularity.

He married, December 4, 1872, Helen E. Gandy, and had one daughter. On July 24, 1895, he married Ray English, of New York City, who survived him.

The Secretary saw him but little after graduation, but in later life he appeared to be the same Harry Leavitt as of old, light-hearted and apparently free from care. His last year, however, was one of suffering, having gone through with a critical surgical operation. He was hopeful of ultimate recovery, but his hopes were not fulfilled.

JOHN LINDSLEY. Born 1845.

Milton, March 20, 1907.

Dear Frank,—We left Milton in October, 1898, to return to Japan, leaving one son at Harvard and the other at the Milton Academy fitting for Harvard.

We remained at Yokohama, Japan, for four years, returning to Milton, Mass., in July, 1902.

While in Yokohama, I served again as chairman of the Foreign Chamber of Commerce, and was president of the American Asiatic Association of Japan during the last year of our stay.

Before leaving Japan, I sold out my interest in the trade name of Frazar & Co., gomei kaisha, and retired from active business.

In May, 1905, I took my wife and daughter to Italy, South Tyrol, Switzerland, and France. We kept house in Paris for over a year with our Japanese servants whom we brought with us from Yokohama, and we were surprised to find how easily they adapted themselves to French ways, and how soon they acquired enough of the vernacular to market and shop for us.

Looking forward to seeing you at the Class Dinner, I remain,

Sincerely yours,

JOHN LINDSLEY.

EDWARD WINDSOR MEALEY. Born 1846.

The following sketch which has come into the hands of the Secretary is so complete and interesting that it is printed in full:—

Edward Windsor Mealey attended the private schools of Hagerstown until 1858, when at the age of twelve he entered St. James College, from which he was graduated in 1864, this being the last class to receive diplomas from that institution, as it was then abandoned on account of the Civil War. In September, 1865, he entered the Junior Class at Harvard University, being one of the three students from the Southern States who entered that institution immediately upon the close of the war. He was graduated in 1867 with the degree of A.B., and passed into the Harvard Law School, from which he was graduated with the degree of LL.B. in 1869.

Upon his return to Hagerstown he practised law for about five years, but gradually dropped his profession to engage in commercial pursuits. He was at one time cashier of the Hagerstown Bank, and has been a director in that bank since 1874. He was also president of the Hempstead Gas and Electric Light Company of Long Island. In 1896 he became the Treasurer of the Crawford Bicycle Company, and director of its financial affairs. Mr. Mealey is now a director of the Washington County branch of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad and of the Cumberland Valley Railroad; president of the Hagerstown Water Company; president of the Welch Water, Light, and Power Company of Welch, W. Va.; treasurer of the Tygarts River Lumber Company of West Virginia; treasurer of the Glady Fork Lumber Company of West Virginia; president of the Mill Creek and Addison Railroad Company; director of the Hagerstown Electric Railway Company and of the Rose Hill Cemetery Company of Hagerstown.

In 1884 Mr. Mealey was a candidate for the mayoralty of Hagerstown, being defeated by a small majority. He was elected street commissioner of Hagerstown for one term, and served as president of that board until 1887, when he was appointed United States Consul to Munich by President Cleveland. He held the office of consul until the close of Cleveland's first administration. When in Munich, he wrote several valuable reports to the government, one of which dealt with the draining and sanitation system of the city.

Upon his return in 1890 he was elected cashier of the Hagerstown Bank. He is a financier of great capacity, and while cashier of the bank he greatly advanced the business of that ancient institution, and at the same time by a liberal extension of banking facilities to manufacturing establishments promoted the industries of Hagerstown. In 1892 he was appointed school commissioner for Washington County.

Mr. Mealey has devoted himself largely to working in the interest of the public, and especially for the library and for the establishment of a hospital in Hagerstown. The library to him more than to any other individual owes its existence and its present prosperity.

In August, 1901, the doors of the Washington County Free Library were open to the people. Several years before that time Benjamin F. Newcomer, of Baltimore, a native of Washington County, had offered to endow a free library in Hagerstown, for the benefit of the people of his native county, with the sum of $50,000 well invested in 5 per cent. securities, provided the people of the county would erect a building for the library. Several attempts were made by public-spirited citizens to carry out this condition. But the work was progressing slowly when Mr. Edward W. Mealey, of Hagerstown, undertook it, and his efforts were speedily crowned with the most gratifying success. He procured the passage of two enabling acts by the legislature at the session of 1898, chapters 248 and 217 of the laws of that year, which assured an annual revenue of $2,500 for the library. The first of these acts authorizes the county commissioners of Washington County to make a contract to pay $1,500 a year in perpetuity to the Library Association, and the other chapter confers power upon the Mayor and Council of Hagerstown to make a perpetual contract for the payment of $1,000 a year. The county commissioners and the mayor and council exercised the authority conferred on them by the legislature, and entered into the contracts. Then Mr. Mealey took up the work of supplying the building for the library. A board of library trustees was formed composed, of Edward W. Mealey, president, Rev. J. Spangler Kieffer, William Kealhofer, William Newcomer, William Updegraff, John W. Stonebraker, and Charles A. Little. The library staff was composed of Mary L. Titcomb, librarian; and Misses Lilian Barkdoll, Nellie Chrissinger, and Charlotte C. Gibson, assistants.

To the trustees Mr. Mealey donated a lot of ground situated in the very centre of the town, on Jonathan Street, across from the side of the court-house. A canvass of the town and county was made to procure subscriptions to the building fund. The amount obtained fell far short of what was required, but the building was erected and furnished, and was opened for use in August, 1901. The design of the building was the gift of Mr. Bruce Price, a distinguished architect of New York City, and of Washington County parentage. The cost of the building was about $20,000, and of the book stacks and furniture about $12,000 more. At the completion of the work there was a debt of about $21,000, $5,000 of which was paid by Mr. Mealey and $16,082.65 by children of the late Mr. B. F. Newcomer; namely, Mrs. Henry B. Gilpin, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Mary L. Maslin and Mr. Waldo Newcomer.

He is the treasurer of the Washington County Hospital Association, to which he is giving the same fostering care which he bestows upon the library. As a director in the Washington County Water Company, he was active in procuring a supply of pure water for Hagerstown, and while street commissioner he devoted a great deal of his time to the improvement of the town. He is a member of the Conococheague Club of Hagerstown. In politics an Independent Democrat. His church affiliations are with the Episcopal church in Hagerstown.

Mr. Mealey has resided from his infancy to the present time in the house purchased by his father in 1846. It is built of blue limestone, in large heavy blocks, has very thick walls, and bears the date "1785" cut in a large stone. It is referred to by an early newspaper as "a dyeing, fulling, and weaving establishment at the intersection of the road leading to the western country and that leading to Williams Ferry" (now Williamsport) "on the south." It now forms the south-west corner of West Washington and Jonathan Streets, and is in excellent preservation.

New York City, June 6, 1907.

My dear Lincoln,—I have little to add to your report. Things go on with me with a reasonable mixture of work and play, particularly the former,—a deduction I am making because of the fact that almost daily I find myself wishing that the day was forty-eight hours rather than twenty-four hours long, so impossible does it seem to get through with what lies before one. I suppose it is the old New England habit of following the will-o'-the-wisp and trying to accomplish something, —a habit perhaps which it would be well to grow out of.

I send you the titles of a few papers I have written since the last report, since you are kind enough to say you want them:—

"Some Cases treated by the X-Ray," Medical Record, May 30, July 25, and August 8, 1903; "Treatment of Cancer by the X-Ray, with Remarks on the Use of Radium," International Journal of Surgery, October, 1903; "Radiotherapy and Surgery, with a Plea for Pre-operative Radiations," Medical Record, March 25, 1905; "Memoranda relating to the Discovery of Surgical Anæsthesia, and Dr. William T. G. Morton's Relation to this Event," The Post-Graduate, April, 1905; "Radio-active Water and Other Fluids and their Preparation," Journal of Advanced Therapeutics, October, 1905; "New High Potential High Frequency 'Cataphoric' Electrode or Phoric Medicamental Electrode," Medical Record, November 18, 1905; "High Frequency High Potential Cataphoric and Fluorescent Electrodes," Medical Record, December 16, 1905; "Improved Cataphoric Electrode for High Potential Currents," Medical Record, June 16, 1906; "Tripsin for the Cure of Cancer," Medical Record, December 8, 1906; "A case of Cancer treated by Tripsin," New York Medical Journal, March 9, 1907; "Preoperative Radiation and Surgical Treatment of Cancer," Medical Record, May 18, 1907.

Our class is now getting so thinned out that I suppose you always keep an eye on a blank line for each for the obituary. It is good luck for us that we chanced to elect a class secretary who is likely to survive all of us. Who will be the last veteran tottler to attend the class dinner? He will have to be a sort of a Pooh-Bah, and be toastmaster, audience, and consumer of viands all at the same time. This may sound lugubrious, but it isn't: it is merely a point of view which comes with passing years, and ours, yours and mine and others of our class, seem rapidly racing on like the last drops of sand in the hourglass. But, when the egg is boiled, I suppose some one will turn the glass over for a new bout, and we may start it all over again.

Anyway, the memories of those happy days at Harvard when we were all together have always been one of the greenest cases in my life, and, I may say, surely in the lives of all of us who form the class of '67.

With best regards,

Yours sincerely,

William J. Morton.

*JEROME BONAPARTE POOLE.

Born in East Abington, Mass., December 14, 1844. Died in Southern Pines, N.C., January 21, 1906.

He was the son of Franklin and Ann (Sargent) Poole, and was born in East Abington (now Rockland), Mass., December 14, 1844. Until 1862 he attended Abington public schools, and was partially fitted for college under the instruction of George R. Dwelley (H. C. 1853), completing his preparatory studies by a six months' course at Phillips Exeter Academy He was admitted to college in July, 1863, with the class. In the winter of 1865–66, during his Junior year, he taught school, as was frequently done in those days, for twelve weeks in Easton, Mass. After leaving college, he taught school successively in North Abington, Walpole, and Stoughton, in the latter place as principal of the high school, and from November, 1873, to September, 1899, he was submaster in the English High School of Boston. He resigned his position because of ill-health. He had travelled abroad and in this country, and at the time of his death had gone South to enjoy the milder winter climate. He served a short term as a member of the Rockland School Committee.

He was much interested in the Rockland Public Library, and served on its board of trustees. He was a member of Standish Lodge, I. O. O. F., of Rockland.

July 6, 1868, he was married to Eurilla A. Shaw, of Abington, Mass., who died August 29, 1880. His only child, a daughter, survives him.

The Rockland Standard said of him:—

"In the death of Jerome B. Poole, Rockland loses one of its most estimable citizens. Although for a number of years incapacitated from active duties through poor health, he has nevertheless taken a lively interest in public affairs, especially in all things affecting the welfare of his native town, and few men were more conversant with its needs and requirements than he. Of a genial temperament, his presence was always an inspiration to those about him. Although he suffered much, he was never outwardly down-hearted or discouraged, and his abundant good-humor and kind-heartedness were most marked in his daily intercourse with his fellow-citizens. Of few men could it more truthfully be said that he enjoyed the highest respect and esteem of all who knew him."

He was always present at our class gatherings, and his loyalty to the class prompted him to make the effort to come when men of less courage would have given up the struggle. He was a good citizen, and his death was a loss to his town and to his class.

*JOSEPH WHEELER REED.

Born in Acton, Mass., August 7, 1844. Died in Maynard, Mass., November 8, 1902.

He was the son of Isaiah and Rhoda (Clough) Reed. He was educated in the public schools of Acton, the Concord School, of which Frank B. Sanborn, '55, was head master, and by John E. Hudson, '62, private tutor, entering college with the class in 1863. For a short time during his college course he taught school in Stow, Mass. He lost considerable time in college from sickness, and was "graduated without passing the annual examinations" by a vote of the Faculty, on advice of Dr. Wyman, after having been sick eight weeks. After leaving college, he studied law in the office of John A. Andrew and at the Harvard Law School, where he received the degree of LL.B. in 1869; was admitted to the bar in January, 1869, and from that time practised law in Boston and later in Maynard, which was his residence during the last twenty years of his life. He went to South America in 1884, and was in Uruguay, Paraguay, and Brazil until May, 1885. He was a member of the Maynard School Committee, and held other town offices.

June 25, 1872, he married Mary Jane Brooks, of Maynard, who survived him with a son, Brooks (H. C. 1895).

23rd March, 1907.

My dear Lincoln,—I have been living for the past five years very much as I did for the ten years before that. My work, however, has been chiefly of a political and biographical character. I have spent two summers at Lake Edward in Canada, fishing for trout and health at the same time, and three summers at the Rangeley Lakes.

In November, 1902, Herman Linde, the German art collector, brought Rubens's masterpiece, the "Feast of Herod," to my house, so that I might write a critique on it, and we gave it a private exhibition, which was attended by some two hundred people. A more important event was the birth of my only child on March 10, 1904, a remarkably strong, healthy and handsome boy, whom we christened George Lindsley Stearns, for my father and my college chum. Lindsley responded to the compliment with a handsome donation. Besides publishing "Cambridge Sketches" and the Life of Hawthorne, I contributed papers to the Emerson and Hawthorne centennials.

If you are thinking of adding an epilogue to your poem of fifteen years ago, I have no doubt it would give your classmates much pleasure.

Yours faithfully,
Frank P. Stearns.

*GEORGE HENRY TRIPP.

Born in South Yarmouth, Mass., May 30, 1844. Died in Washington, D.C., April 8, 1880.

*FREDERIC TUDOR.

Born in Boston, Mass., February 11, 1845. Died October 28, 1902, in Lincoln, Mass.

He was the son of Frederic and Euphemia (Fenno) Tudor.

He attended the Phillips Grammar School in Boston from the age of ten to fourteen, and after three years at St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H., he went abroad, returning in time for a four months' preparation for college. He entered with the class of 1866, but, owing to insufficient preparation in the classics was unable to keep up with the class, and at the end of Freshman year he joined the new class of 1867. He completed the course, and after graduation was married June 24, 1867, to Louisa Simes, of Plymouth, Mass., and went immediately to Europe. He returned in 1868, and engaged in civil engineering in Boston. In 1875 he established, as a new profession, the art of domestic or sanitary engineering, calling his business sanitary architecture, and he was regarded as high authority on all hygienic questions. He constructed the appliances for heating and ventilating the New York State Capitol at Albany, and had many other important professional commissions, including the ventilation of the Boston Public Library. He was always of an inventive turn of mind, and he introduced many useful mechanical and scientific appliances.

During the last year of his life failing health caused him to retire from active business, and died after a lingering illness. His wife, a son Frederic (H. C. 1891), and four daughters survived him.

A frank, open-hearted, generous, lovable fellow was Fred Tudor. Loyal to his class, lover of truth, hater of shams, a true friend, brave in contending against the inroads of disease, one of our best beloved.

*EDWARD STICKNEY WOOD.

Born in Cambridge, Mass., April 28, 1846. Died in Pocasset, Mass., July 11, 1905.
The following memorial was written for the Harvard Graduates' Magazine, September, 1905:—

At about the time of the foundation of Harvard College, Jonathan Wood and William Stickney came to this country, and were among the first settlers of that part of Essex County in Massachusetts which a few years later became the town of Bradford. Their descendants remained for the most part in New England towns, and in 1841 Alfred Wood, a descendant of Jonathan, in the sixth generation, married Laura Stickney, a descendant of William, in the seventh generation, and their second son was Edward Stickney Wood, born in Cambridge, April 28, 1846.

At the usual age he entered the public schools of Cambridge, and passed through the various lower schools in order. In 1859 he was admitted to the Cambridge High School, where he fitted for college, the head masters during that time being Lyman R. Williston and William J. Rolfe. He was admitted to Harvard College in 1863, and was graduated in 1867. During his college course he was never absent from college exercises a whole day at a time.

Early in life he had decided to be a physician, and his studies were chosen, so far as the limited elective system of his college days permitted, with a view to that end. He naturally took courses in chemistry, and was interested in it because of its general usefulness to his chosen profession. He entered the Harvard Medical School in the fall of 1867, and remained there until March, 1869, when he was appointed house pupil at the United States Marine Hospital in Chelsea, and remained there one year. In May, 1870, he was appointed surgical house pupil in the Massachusetts General Hospital, and remained there another year. In 1871 he received the degree of M.D. from the Harvard Medical School.

Chance seems to play an important part in determining the course of a man's life. Until the time of his graduation from the Medical School he looked forward to the life of a physician in general practice, and he would undoubtedly have made his mark as such, but just then there was a vacancy in the Department of Chemistry in the Harvard Medical School. Dr. John Bacon had been for many years professor, and for several years Dr. James C. White had been assistant professor. Dr. Bacon retired, and Dr. White was desirous of turning his attention to dermatology, in which branch he has signally distinguished himself and honored his profession. The vacant chair was to be filled, and the opportunity and the man came together. The position of Assistant Professor of Chemistry was offered to Dr. Wood. He hesitated somewhat, being reluctant to give up the life of a practising physician, to which he had been looking forward with enthusiasm, but finally decided to accept the position, and entered upon his duties September 1, 1871.

During the second half of the year 1871–72 he obtained leave of absence, and spent six months in the study of physiological and medical chemistry in laboratories in Berlin and Vienna. Under his teaching the Harvard Medical School was among the first, if not the very first, of the medical schools of this country to put medical chemistry upon a systematic basis. June 12, 1876, he was appointed full Professor of Chemistry, and continued as such until his death at Pocasset, July 11, 1905. He married (1) Irene E. Hills, December 26, 1872, who died, leaving a daughter; and (2) Elizabeth A. Richardson, December 24, 1883, who survives him without children.

Some of his most conspicuous appointments and services have been the following: 1873, chemist to the Massachusetts General Hospital; 1874, one of the three medical commissioners of Boston to investigate and report on the sanitary qualities of the Sudbury, Shawsheen, Mystic, and Charles River waters; 1875, one of the commissioners to compare the gas supplied to the city of Boston with that of other cities in the United States and Europe as to quality, cost of manufacture, and price; 1878, one of a committeee of the Massachusetts Medical Society to report on questions of importance in connection with a proposed revision of the "United States Pharmacopœia"; 1880, delegate from the Massachusetts Medical Society to the National Convention at Washington, D.C., for the revision of the "United States Pharmacopœia," and at that convention appointed one of a committee of twenty-five called "The Committee of Revision and Publication of the Pharmacopœia of the United States of America, 1880"; 1879, appointed, by the special committee on water supply of the city of Cambridge, to examine and report upon the water supply of Cambridge; 1882, analyst to the Massachusetts Board of Health, Lunacy, and Charity. In 1878 he went to Denver, Col., as expert witness in the Higgins-Marston murder trial, and since that time he has acted as expert in numerous murder trials in the New England States.

He was a member of many societies, chiefly those connected with the medical profession. His many publications do not, on the whole, show him to have been a contributor to science as an original discoverer, but rather mark him as a man of great ability in developing known principles, by careful and patient investigation, into practical and useful application. His articles on arsenical poisoning and blood-stains are notable contributions to those subjects. As an expert witness in murder trials, he was without a peer in this country, and possibly in the world. Naturally, it was in this capacity that he was best known to the public. It may be said to have been the spectacular side of his career, but, if there was anything spectacular or sensational about his appearance in court, it was because the lawyers and newspaper reporters made him appear so. He was himself the very opposite. Calm, unruffled, unconcerned as to the effect his testimony might have upon the jury, he aimed at the truth. "Veritas" was the principle he breathed into his system at Harvard College, and that watchword followed him in all his investigations. One writer has said, "It would be false to picture him as a man with the detective instinct, whose profession set his nerves tingling with excitement of criminal adventure." He was just and fair, his conclusions were positive, and he was unshaken by the art or skill of cross-examination. He was an unquestioned authority on bloodstains, and eminent witnesses for the other side were often forced to acknowledge that they looked up to him as the teacher from whom they had learned their methods.

Important as his services were in these various capacities, which called his great talents into action, his real life-work was in a much broader field, and far more significant. When we consider the opportunity of a teacher, for more than thirty years, of great numbers of young men who are preparing themselves to go forth into the world to relieve the sufferings of their fellow-men, and when that teacher combines in himself knowledge and the ability of imparting that knowledge in such a way as to interest his pupils, we are impressed with the seriousness of his mission. Steadily, patiently, earnestly, and successfully Professor Wood has done his work. All other incidental matters fade into comparative insignificance by the side of this great possibility for good. This opportunity he accepted, and how well he fulfilled his mission hundreds of his pupils will bear willing testimony, and thousands of those to whom they have brought relief from suffering will add their blessing.

Francis H. Lincoln, '67.

WILLIAM WORTHINGTON. Born 1847.

Lawyer in Cincinnati, Ohio.

He writes:—

"There is really nothing to add to the schedule in the prior report aside from the fact that in February and March last, as one of the Commercial Club of this city, I was one of the party that took the trip to Panama under auspices of the Commercial Clubs of Boston, Chicago, Cincinnati, and St. Louis. We sailed from Charleston; landed at St. Thomas in the Danish West Indies for a few hours, thence for San Juan, Porto Rico; crossed that island by team to Ponce; sailed thence to Colon; spent two days on the isthmus, examining all work there, and returned by way of Kingston, Jamaica, Santiago, Cuba, to Charleston, having a most delightful trip of twenty-two days from embarkation to return. Your Boston papers have had more or less of it in them, and I suppose you know more than I could tell you.

"I hope to get on to Commencement this year, but cannot promise as yet."

CLASS OF 1867 SCHOLARSHIP.

Our classmate, SAMUEL HOAR, acted for the executor of the will of Robert Treat Paine, late of Brookline, and whatever fee he received would diminish the amount to be ultimately paid to the College under the will. He was paid two thousand dollars, and disposed of it June 1, 1886, as follows:—

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College the sum of two thousand dollars, to be by them invested and the income thereof annually added to the principal, until the principal shall be thereby increased to twenty-five hundred dollars; and thereafter the net income shall be annually paid at or near the beginning of the second half of each College year, to some member of the Freshman Class, in the Academic Department of Harvard College, who shall seem to the said President and Fellows meritorious and in need of assistance.

"Said fund and the accumulation and income shall be known as the CLASS OF 1867 SCHOLARSHIP, and in the distribution of the income thereof children or grandchildren of members of the Class of 1867 of Harvard College, who are deemed worthy, shall be preferred."

The fund was increased by subscriptions from other classmates amounting to $515.86 in 1887 and 1888, and a legacy of $1,000 from Clement Kelsey Fay in 1898, making a total of $3,515.86 paid to the College. According to the last annual statement of the Treasurer of Harvard College, the fund amounted to $4,876.13, and is available for the purposes for which it was established.

The following is an extract from the will of Clement Kelsey Fay:—

"I give to the President and Fellows of Harvard College one thousand dollars, to be added by them to the principal of the Class of 1867 Scholarship Fund, originally created by my classmate, Samuel Hoar, Esquire, and to be held by them upon the same trust and for the uses specified in his original gift."

THE CLASS SECRETARY'S REPORT.

Read at the Class Supper, June 30, 1897.

To earlier years my thoughts of late have wandered,
As one by one your answers came to me;
On many scenes of college days I've pondered,
And, musing in delightful reverie,

I fancy a Report more entertaining
Than records of our later busy lives;
My youthfulness I seem to be regaining,
The spirit of our college life revives.

Back thirty years my recollection passes,
Those four short years of pleasure I recall.
What cared we for the claims of other classes,
We know that Sixty-seven led them all.

In many ways our class developed early,
Old Hollis smiled at us in mute surprise,
And Stoughton laughed when Silsbee vied with Perley
Some new and cunning mischief to devise.

From earliest days of entrance into college,
'Twas said no Freshmen showed such native wit;
Our tutors found in us no lack of knowledge
Of how in keyholes rat-tail files would fit.

Do you remember how our Tommy, striving
To gain a cut by plugging Hudson's door,
Was nearly caught by Tommy, Prex, arriving,
And would have been in half a minute more?

But, ere the watchful Prexy could accost him,
Our Tommy showed his heels without delay;
The Prexy sprinted after him, but lost him,
And Tommy played the trick another day.

We know full well the ancient rule of hazing
Was quite reversed in sixty-three or four,
When Freshmen dared, in manner most amazing,
To capture and lead off a Sophomore.

Abduct, I might say, for they meant to duck him
Beneath the waters of the Charles so dank;
Bold Freshmen these, it surely must have struck him,
As he was hurried to the river bank.

The doughty Braman, Mounted Rifle Ranger,
Armed to the teeth, and eager for the fray,
With utter disregard of every danger,—
His chum, I pause to note, was Clement Fay,—

In first term Freshman, wore a glossy beaver;
The fighting Sophs this insult could not brook;
Our blood was up, and under Captain Seaver
Excited action for defence we took.

When Jay Galusha tapped his copious fountains,
And Ethics flowed like rivers without end,
When Vinal told of "shells on tops of mountains,"
And "inland maps" Gage failed to comprehend,

The dear old Doctor, with a faith abiding,
Believing them ingenuous and sincere,
These mysteries explained, and, too confiding,
Marked all these sinners "eight" with conscience clear.

We quickly passed to our matriculation,
With Bromberg, Noble, Bates, and Hudson's care;
But, cruel fate! our last examination
Left many valued classmates stranded there.

Since Satan still survived, though dropped from heaven,
As Bogy taught, from "throne of royal state,"
The "Paradise" they "lost," with Sixty-seven,
They hoped might be "regained" with Sixty-eight.

Vacation over, to our books returning,
We longed in vain for one more football fight;
Impatiently each Sophomore was burning
To meet the Freshmen Bloody Monday Night.

The powers forbade, so patiently submitting,
And mourning that the football's work was done,
We loosed its earthly bonds, with service fitting,
And now in heaven its soul is marching on.

When "Birds of Aristophanes" were flying
In drowsy motion, lulling us to sleep,
And all for recitation's end were sighing,
Professor Goodwin gave a sudden leap.

All in a trice the room was in commotion
With bursting bombs and rockets' ruddy glare;
No words of mine can give the faintest notion
Of that wild scene to those who were not there.

With ceaseless din the echoing walls resounded,
The noise was like a hundred Gatling guns,
'Mid fire and smoke, confusion worse confounded,
Each valiant student to the rescue runs.

Now learn the lesson this experience teaches:
At duty's call rush forward with a will
Into the breach,—and then procure new breeches,
But ask the Faculty to pay the bill.

We all remember going to Point Shirley;
But who knows much about our coming back?
We seemed indifferent in the morning early
Whether we rode in omnibus or hack.

The "Menu" called for canvas-back and widgeon,
And every sort of game-bird heart could wish;
But no one knew a partridge from a pigeon,
For Taft served every order from one dish.

And so we had our first convivial meeting,
For everything we cheered with one accord;
Each classmate felt his "heart with pleasure beating,"
And "Bacchus reigned alone our sovereign lord."

When morning prayers were thought to lift us higher,
And strains of music sought that end to gain,
With Bryant, Fay, and Lincoln in the choir,
I fear the music often was a strain.

An unresponsive, chaffing congregation,
How inwardly those students sighed and groaned!
Such music had for them no fascination,
Perhaps it was a little too high-toned.

The limit to our text-books made us lonely,
The tariff on our teachers' books was high,
For their own revenue they wrote them only,
That they might put an honest dollar by.

And when we thought them rather slow in turning
From theirs to some more interesting book,
With studious habits and a thirst for learning,
We tried to hurry up Professor Cooke.

Assured success had crowned our undertaking,
And we conceived relief was near at hand,
But Jopy turned the tables by checkmating
A trick we thought he would not understand.

There seems to be one subject for contention,
Which those who care to may investigate;
To solve the difficulty, let me mention
The real founder of the Advocate.

I find convincing proof for my position
In 1st Corinthians xii. 26.
Saint Paul has there laid down a proposition
I beg you firmly in your minds to fix.

The body is composed of many members:
When honor comes to one, they all rejoice.
If each of us this principle remembers,
We shall agree, without dissenting voice.

That for each part the whole should have the credit,
The act of one for act of all must pass.
And hence though Stearns and Peckham have not said it.
The Advocate's true founder was our Class.

In former days there was a "college spirit,"
"Class feeling," too, possessed us one and all.
Then athletes were selected for true merit
To row our boats or win the silver ball.

No matter from what school he came to college,
  No matter what his station or his name,
If one could row or bat, we must acknowledge,
  Our worship for a hero he could claim.

With every one enthusiasm showing,
  And on the river all our hopes afloat,
When Edmands in the Harvard crew was rowing,
  The spirit of the class was in the boat.

We cheered our nine; we felt none could do better
  To gain the prize and win the victors' wreath;
When on their breasts they wore that crimson letter,
  All Harvard's heart was beating underneath.

A firm united, loyal band of brothers,
  Each classmate's heart and soul were in the fight;
Our athletes, thus backed up by all the others,
  For Harvard's honor fought with all their might.

Class Feeling! College Spirit! If this leaven
  Were working in the College Halls to-day
As in the good old days of Sixty-seven,
  More victories, perhaps, might come our way.

Those good old days, so full of joy and gladness!
  If thoughts of them have made you young again,
And helped to drive away dull care and sadness,
  This Class Report has not been made in vain.

REFLECTIONS OF THE CLASS SECRETARY.

Read at the Class Supper, June 23, 1903.

With brilliant hues the sunrise gilds the morning,
The world seems wondrous fair to youthful eyes;
All nature bids a welcome to day's dawning,
The sun pours out its light through cloudless skies.

And, when the glorious mid-day sun is shining,
Should dark and gloomy clouds obscure its light,
Let there be neither sorrow nor repining,
Above the clouds its rays are clear and bright.

From out the mist a gorgeous rainbow gleaming
The promise gives that all is for the best;
The golden sunset lights in splendor streaming
Soon soften into twilight in the west.

When we began our college days together,
It was the sunrise of our dawning life;
We gave no thought to change of wind or weather,
We had no foregleam of an after-strife.

But trials sore disturbed our noonday dreaming,
We bade our best and noblest friends good-bye;
With thoughts of them our memories are teeming,
They live within our hearts and cannot die.

To every cloud there is a silver lining;
Beyond the misty veil eye hath not seen,
The mysteries of life are past divining.
This comfort still abides, our friends have been.

When sunset comes and finds our minds renewing
Old friendships which gave cheer to days long past,
Let gladsome hearts, all gloomy thoughts subduing,
Make happy twilight of our lives at last.

WHERE ARE OUR SINGERS TO-NIGHT?

Read at the Class Supper, June 26, 1906, by William G. Peckham.

We were at shuckings of the corn;
And soon we meet you in the morn.

I.

Quinquenial stars, in the catalogue,
Are finally fixt and fair:
Our classmates shortly gone before
Are spirits debonair.

II.

Over the waters they meet to-night;
The class is there, not here:
Celestial souls, melodious
And free as in Freshman year.

III.

Clem leads the choir, and Ned the cheer,
And Sam presides as of yore;
And Brooks will bless the meat and drink,
For classmates, evermore.

IV.

Hence Richard, Tom, and Fred may eat
The grapes that grow above:
The wine of memory, we drink,
That mellowed in their love.

V.

The magnum sent to us to-night
Is from no other class;
The vines were grown by classmates dear
In a southern mountain pass.

VI.

Lowell and Holmes and Hall are well,
And work for others still;
Leonard and Fox and Sanborn yet,
As leaders, do God's will.

VII.

Of cherubim and seraphim,
They are elected all;
Yet hark, how '67's cheer
Sounds high in heaven's hall.

We were at shuckings of the corn;
And soon we meet you in the morn.
